American Equipment Company is an export management company specializing in the sale of USA and foreign manufactured equipment to railways worldwide. Our scope of supply is in the following areas:

- Railway Maintenance of Way Equipment and Services
- Locomotive and Rolling Stock Spare Parts and Components
- Railway Communications and System Integration
- Permanent Way Facilities and Workshop Equipment

Founded in 1946, American Equipment Company utilizes a network of sales agents worldwide to promote sales and provide after sales service for the broad range of railway equipment sold by Ameco. Each of our foreign sales agencies is staffed with experts in the railway field that have local knowledge about their countries rail system and commercial conditions.

The Company was established shortly after World War II to serve the construction equipment industry with a variety of products, primarily concrete block manufacturing equipment and road manufacturing equipment. One of the products that the firm developed was a ballast tamper to be used on railway tracks. Through these efforts, the Company expanded its railway business to include other manufacturers. This effort started what became American Equipment Company. Over its years of operation, AMECO has provided a means for United States based manufacturers of railway equipment to introduce and distribute their products throughout the world.

AMECO is now the most diversified supplier of U.S. and foreign manufactured railway products in the world. The Company supplies a wide variety of equipment ranging from locomotive spare parts to locomotive simulators to rolling stock spares. The Company also maintains key relationships with a broad network of sales agents throughout the world. As a result of these two factors, the Company maintains a strong position to service both its railway customers with the best products manufactured in the industry, as well as providing suppliers the best opportunity for wide scale distribution.
